

Folks, Colors is our family name!

What is your name? "Colors!", said Austin.

What is your Mommy's name? "Colors!", said Austin.

What is your Daddy's name? "Colors!", said Austin.

Oh gosh!! I'd just known that our family name is Colors!! Well, Austin can be tricky at times so if I want him to seriously answer, then we have to negotiate. In one instance, Austin looked desperate, needing help to unpack a puzzle box. Then, I told him that he had to answer my questions exactly so that I can unpack the box in return. So, this time when I asked him again "What is your name?". Within seconds, he quipped "Austin!". Similarly go for our first names. Folks, if you came across Austin Colors some day, that boy must be this little cheeky guy!

Schooling

A safe place to play, that's our aim of sending Austin to school. If you were to ask me how much he has learned from school, I have no answer. But one thing for sure, Austin plays very hard. He comes home every afternoon flat. After showering and a little snack, he dozes off within minutes for a stretch over 2-3 hours. He is off diaper in school. Except after lunch, Austin tends to confuse poo with wee wee so the staff prefer to put him on until the business is over.

Written by Momma

Thursday, 17 January 2013 14:25

---

Tidy up and keep his books/toys after playing, we notice Austin demonstrated independence, takes up responsibility. Cheeky and jovial, he also jumps, dances and sings a lot (and kind of melodious these days), absolutely from what he experiences in play school.

Whether Austin is giving me answer or not, I usually ask him "How's your day?" after he arrives home. One day, he mumbled all kind of colors including dark green, dark blue and light purple. Seeing his fingernails tainted with watercolor mark, I knew they were probably painting in school. And to my surprise, he pointed to our wash basin and told me "light white", then refer to water hose as "dark white". Yup, both are white in color but how do you differentiate a light white from a dark one? I am still puzzling!

Power of Concentration

Written by Momma
Thursday, 17 January 2013 14:25

© LettersToAustin.com

© LettersToAustin.com

Written by Momma
Thursday, 17 January 2013 14:25

Multiple copies of this page are available for purchase on the LetterstoAustin.com website. For more information, please contact us at info@letterstoastin.com or call 1-800-875-8758.

